WELLBEING

Think of self-regulation as your inner control center—it's how you understand and handle your own behavior and reactions. It's a huge help for students as they learn to navigate school, build friendships, and grow more independent. The foundations are built in younger years, but it's actually a skill that keeps on developing all the way into adulthood!

You can support your child by chatting openly, planning together, and exploring how different emotions work.

It's important for students to learn how to understand and manage their emotions—it supports their wellbeing as they grow. A simple way you can help is by encouraging them to recognize and name what they're feeling; that really lays the groundwork for them to handle those big emotions later on. We use the Resilience Project to develop emotional regulation skills. The Resilience Project focuses on emotional literacy as a core component of mental health. It teaches that recognizing, labeling, and expressing feelings in a healthy way allows individuals to use effective regulation strategies and manage the intensity of uncomfortable emotions.

The Raising Children's Network website provides parents with tips and tricks to help support your child's emotional regulation.

School Disco - Thank you!

A huge thank you to everyone who came along to the disco. It was such a fun night! Some of our smallest attendees had some of the biggest and best moves, clearly inherited from their parents.

We'd also like to acknowledge Sharon, Caroline and all the teachers and aides who attended and helped make the night so enjoyable for the students.

A special mention to our office staff, Louise, Julie, Meg, and Logan on tech, who helped manage ticketing and the online sign-in and sign-out process. Side note: none of our PA events happen without the incredible support of the school office!

And of course, a huge shout-out to PA members Anna B, Kaye K, Lauren R and Aish for putting in the hours and helping throughout the entire event, as well as to all of our wonderful parent volunteers who helped make the night such a success.

It really is one of the most fun nights on the school calendar, and we hope the students had as much fun as we did!
